THURSDAY EVENING, JUNE 11.

In the House of Representatives on Friday, Mr. Allison, Radical, of Iowa, speaking of the frauds in the revenue service, and endeavoring to show that the President is responsible for them-remarked "that in the city of New York, where revenue frauds were most unbounded, no 'officer, except one or two, had been removed by the President. Fraudulent practices had gone to such an extent in Richmond that even the judicial ermine was stained by them, and yet no removals had been made." Mr. Allison should have known that the President has not the power of removal in some cases hinted at.

The Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun says that one of the political personages in Washington is "an enterprising and indefatigable adventurer, who was in Washington less than five months ago, and boasted that he was going down to Arkansas to get a good office. He now comes back elected to the House of Representatives, and, with his colleagues, is very anxious to commence the pleasant pastime of drawing $5,000 a year, with nothing to do. There has been quite an influx of the Southern loyalists this week, and Senators have no rest for them.

A letter from a gentleman in a neighboring county, says: "I hope our Conservative speakers will constantly address themselves to the reason of the people; -for in these times, argument is needed, more than rhetoric. Public speakers should exercise, too, their best judgments on the discussion of the topics they present. I think there are Union men in this county who feel that the swing of the pendulum in its reaction against secession, has gone too far; and there is an apparent disposition among some to return the regular beat."

address before the National Manufacturers' Association, held at Cleveland, May, 27, in which he said, "if Ben. Wade had come into the Executive power, you would have seen the most radical revolution in the character and capacity of the public service that ever occurred in this or any other country." At least thirty nine thousand men, Mr. Ward says, would have been turned out of office. So the Radical office seekers see what a chance they lost, when impeachment failed!

Barrett, the Fenian, implicated in the Clerk enwell affair, was executed in London on the 26th ult. Those most conversant with executions declared that no convict ever met his doom with more signal courage than the unhappy man who suffered; and the "Good bye, Barrett," " God bless you Barrett," yelled from all portions of the vast crowd in attendance, showed that he had much popular sympathy in his favor. There was much disorder and some fighting among the crowd.

The Constitution framed by the Convention of Alabama was lost, only 69,000 out 170,000 registered votes having been cast in favor of it; yet, although the Constitution thus failed, after being submitted to the test prescribed by Congress itself, the Senate has adopted an amendment to the five States bill offered by Mr. Wilson to include Alabama in the provisions of the bill! Was ever the like of such things seen or heard of before, in a government having a Constitution, or regulated by

The amendment to include Alabama in the omnibus admission bill, which passed the Sena bare majority of one, was reaffirmed in the Senate yesterday by a vote of 27 to 16. A number of Senators who were opposed to it, were, however, absent. The debate on the bill lasted more than nine hours without intermission. Finally the Senate, after remaining in continuous session for eleven hours, passed the omnibus admission bill by a vote of 31 to 5.

The House of Representatives passed the New York Steamship Navigation bill yesterday, but at present it only authorizes the Postmaster General to arrange with the company for carrying the mails across the Atlantic. This company does not own a vessel of any kind, but is required to have seven steamships built within one year, and for the mail service will receive the postage on matter transported -about $400,000 per annum.

During the past three months only five of the forty-one standing committees of the House of Representatives have had an opportunity to report. Hence an immense number of bills has accumulated. It is proposed, now, to allow ception of reports of committees.
